YESTERDAY
The political orator delights in pointing with pride to the great achievements of the men of yesterday. He lives in the past and dwells upon the memories of the dead. His listeners yawn a little, prop their eyes open with broken matches, or let their heads go a nodding. Then he changes the staging by calling down the anathemas of somebody on his partisan enemies. That causes the men of today to sit up and take notice of things not connected with yesterday.
There is something very elusive about yesterday. Yesterday is not a word to tie to in this age of progression for it will bring disappointment. It matters not what good deeds our fathers performed nor what wonderful feats they accomplished. The work was done under conditions existing at that time. We do not do things today as did our forefathers. The inventive geniuses have changed the plans made over the rules and adopted new ideas. They have forced the people of today to get out of the ruts of dreamland and stand on the hilltops of real life.
Forget yesterday.
Debs adherents have no cause to fear he will change his position during the campaign.

GROWING UP WITH WARREN HARDING

"ALL THE WORLD LOVES A LOVER"

By JACK WARWICK

Boyhood Playmate, School Chum and First Newspaper Associate of the Republican Presidential Nominee

Warren Harding made a friend among the Captains when he rescued the wife of the Dark Man and saved her from an unmerciful wetting and possible drowning, by carrying her a-hore in his strong arms! (I think that exclamation point, or note of admiration, belongs there.)

It came to pass that W. G. was spending a brief recuperative season at Daytona, Fla., at the tail end of one winter, leaving the small Star office staff to run the paper as best we knew. Mr. Amos H. Kling was at the winter resort at the time.

Perhaps I should not tell this story, because of a shortage of details, but what I know of it seems to fit in here. Anyway, something happened to the boat in which Mrs. Amos Kling was a passenger. She simply had to be rescued, and it was providential that W. G. was there to carry the estimable lady a-hore. Gallantry toward a graceful woman is never lost, and from that time on Mrs. Amos Kling was a friend of Warren Harding.

"All the World Loves a Lover"

Early in the year 1890 Warren Harding's loveliness had advanced so far that the subject of matrimony was obscuring his mind. Don't misunderstand me. He didn't tell me his thoughts on the subject, but I knew he was head over heels in contemplation. How did I know? Simple enough. He advised me to get married, and it would not have been like him to advise me to take the precipitous plunge had he not been expecting to follow. That would have been contrary to the old swimmin' hole rules.

The Dark Man no longer worried W. G. In fact, the young editor said to me something like this, in substance:

"I have about decided that I would rather have Amos Kling's enmity than his friendship. As it is, he now lets would want to tell me how to run my business."

Verily, I believe the Dark Man's campaign against W. G. was an asset. They say "all the world loves a lover." However true that may be, an overwhelming majority of the people of Marion were in favor of the young editor of the Star, as against his prospective father-in-law.

Success No Longer Problematic

Six years of struggle, of good humor and the best sort of patient human nature has brought us of the Star to pleasant days. No more fun perhaps, but greater assurance. There was no longer any question of ultimate success. Marion people were more convinced than ever that the paper had come to stay. We could go there on better. We not only felt that it had come to stay, but that it had come to grow. If we did not improve it from week to week we felt that we had failed. Then there was a "hitching up of suspender" and intensified effort.

A gratifying thing was that we were gaining recognition among outside papers. We were being quoted, and I think we had been called promptly. While W. G. was writing long editorials, without apparent effort I was working to build down whatever I might have to say to the public. We represented the long and short of it in editorial writing, but neither of us ever reached that state of mind where anything was good simply because we wrote it. If I happened to produce something that pleased W. G. particularly he had a way of saying:

"Jack, that is almost as good as I could have done."

We understood each other in these matters always. There came a time later when I used to have the responsibility of the office during his absence. It was on one of these occasions that he sent me to the back of the dictionary by calling me his alter ego. (Look it up yourself.)

Our reporter Rhoads was covering a lot of territory. His legs were tireless and his mind was never at rest. If we were closing the forms for the day and he had nothing at the moment to do he would remark casually:

"Guess I'll go out and watch the court house; it might fall down before we get on the press."

We had another reporter who possessed the soul of a poet, and for that reason was not the newsgatherer that Rhoads was. Where Henry Sheets, mentioned in an early chapter, was voluminous and sonorous this had more words than news. I have accused him of arranging his facts to fit his phrases. This seems like a severe accusation as I look back on it now, but the object was to impress him with the necessity of being more careful of his facts.

This man, George M. Hinds, has a little poem on the Star now, and I hope to see it in print if he feels that I have been too severe in these references. I am ready to take off my hat to him in recognition of his faithfulness. It is no small thing to pled along in one newspaper office for thirty years or more.

But the one big up-standing fact in these references to the boys of the Star is W. G.'s patience with all of us. He was not only patient but he was an inspiration. He never sent anybody out with a heavy heart to begin a day's work.

The Happy Ending

It was in the spring of 1891, when the robins were building summer homes about the town of Marion, that another new home was being finished and fitted in Mount Vernon Avenue, one of the beautiful residence streets of the town. It is this pretty, cozy dwelling place the Republicans are now journeying and will continue to journey through the summer months of this year. They are going there to meet the W. G. of this story.

This is going to be a wonderful summer for Mr. and Mrs. Warren G. Harding, just as that summer back there in 1891 was wonderful to Warren G. Harding and Florence Kling. They were as busy as the robins building this Mount Vernon Avenue home. So intensely interested were they that their minds and their hearts were absorbed in the work. I may say, too, that the gracious woman who was carried to safety that day down there in Daytona, Fla., by the young editor of the Star, was also interested in this new building regardless of the objections of the Dark Man.

It was in this home that Warren Harding and Florence Kling were married in July, 1891. And it was this home that soon came to be recognized and heralded as one of the most hospitable in Marion. Members of the Star office force of workmen were always made to feel as welcome there as were the leading men and women of the town.

It should be said that the original porch of the Harding house was a modest one. Later the splendid, comfortable affair that is to be the "front porch" of the 1920 campaign, was added. I remember asking W. G. soon following its completion, if he expected some day to get into politics. For an answer I received a smile that might or might not have been set down as inscrutable.

Gruesome Paving.

Tombstones have been employed in Nottinghamshire, Derbyshire, Lincolnshire and Lancashire, England, for purposes of paving, and some years ago the inhabitants of the Vale of Belvoir raised a vehement protest against such stones being used as a pathway leading to the parish church. The local authorities, however, sought to justify the measure on the ground that there were plenty of old gravestones on hand, which, if used, might result in a saving of taxes.

Unwoven Persian Rugs.

The author of a book called "When I Was a Boy in Persia" says that certain rugs used in Persian houses have not yet found a place in the American market. These are large felt carpets called haman. They are made, not by weaving, but by beating the wool together and then pressing it. They are very thick, warm and noiseless, with red, cream and white borders, and with a field dotted with red, black, white, green, blue and golden circles of wool—quite a Joseph's coat in color.—The Outlook.

Eat Less Meat If Back Hurts

Take a glass of Salts to flush kidneys if bladder bothers you—Drink lots of water

Eating meat regularly eventually produces kidney trouble in some form or other, says a well known authority because the uric acid in meat excites the kidneys, they become overworked, get sluggish, clog up and cause all sorts of distress, particularly back ache and misery in the kidney region; rheumatic twinges, excruciating headaches, indigestion, constipation, torpid liver, sleeplessness, bladder and urinary irritation.

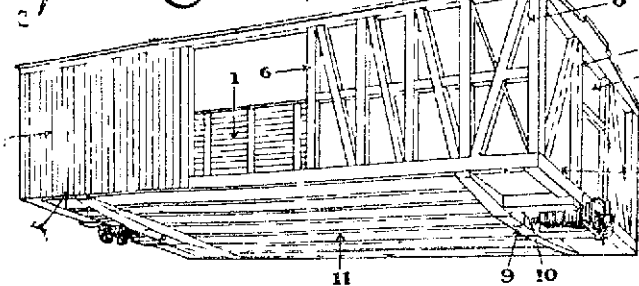

The moment your back hurts or kidneys aren't acting right or if bladder bothers you, get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any good pharmacy, take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salt is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithium, and has been used for generations to flush clogged kidneys and stimulate them to normal activity, also to neutralize the acids in the urine so it no longer irritates, thus ending bladder disorders.

Jad Salts cannot harm anyone, makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which millions of men and women take now and then to keep the kidneys and urinary organs clean, thus avoiding serious kidney disease.

Novel Use for Ice

An engineer has invented the following method for making hollow concrete blocks. Hitherto it has been difficult to make large cavities in concrete, but it can be done, the engineer points out, by embedding blocks of ice in the mass of concrete and introducing small outlets for the escape of the water after melting. This method also makes unnecessary the constant moistening usual in concrete work, as it is automatically supplied by the melting ice.

Grain Cars in Bad Condition

National Crop Improvement Service
W E NOT only have a shortage of cars in which to ship grain, but there is hardly a car in suitable condition. Grain is the only business which has no cars of its own. Box cars set in at the elevator, must be cleaned from lime, salt, fish, brick, manure and the residue of a thousand other things which have been formerly shipped and the worst of it is these cars leak everywhere.

The weighing department of the Chicago board of trade makes a report on every car, and from the looks of some of these reports, grain could be as well shipped in crates as to depend upon the car holding it to the end of the journey. Cars leak under the grain floor, at the end, over, through and around. Grain doors are bulged and broken and sometimes shatter. See fig. 1. Car heels at the end of door, fig. 2; loose sheathings, fig. 3; side of car fig. 4, end of car fig. 5; at the door post, fig. 6; end post, fig. 7; corner post, fig. 8; king bolt, fig. 9; draw bar, fig. 10; bottom of car, fig. 11.

And yet so closely are these cars watched that if properly "compensated" with paper there is very little loss, in dispute.

All elevator men and station agents are urged to report cars leaking in transit.

The bad condition of these cars will not be remedied for some time, at least not until after this crop, so shippers are urged to carefully inspect the cars before sending them on their way.

Iodine

Iodine, the most important by-product of the nitrate industry, is extracted from the liquor which remains after the nitrate has been precipitated. Although some sodium iodide is contained in practically all caniche, iodine is produced by only a portion of the nitrate companies, and the output of these companies is carefully regulated by a producers' trust, in order that the limited market may not be overstocked.

Marine Glue

Marine glue is prepared by dissolving one part of India rubber in crude benzine and mixing with two parts of shellac by the aid of heat. The waterproof character of this cement in connection with its elastic flexibility makes it a useful substance in many applications to horse construction and to turnouts. The glue is applied with a brush when warm and cools with promptness. It was originally intended to be used chiefly on board ship and is well known in Europe.

YESTERDAY

The political orator delights in pointing with pride to the great achievements of the men of yesterday. He lives in the past and dwells upon the memories of the dead. His listeners yawn a little, prop their eyes open with broken matches, or let their heads go a nodding. Then he changes the staging by calling down the anathemas of somebody on his partisan enemies. That causes the men of today to sit up and take notice of things not connected with yesterday.

There is something very elusive about yesterday. Yesterday is not a word to tie to in this age of progression for it will bring disappointment. It matters not what good deeds our fathers performed nor what wonderful feats they accomplished. The work was done under conditions existing at that time. We do not do things today as did our forefathers. The inventive geniuses have changed the plans made over the miles and adopted new ideas. They have forced the people of today to get out of the ruts of dreamland and stand on the hilltops of real life.

Forget yesterday.

Debs adherents have no cause to fear he will change his position during the campaign.

GROWING UP WITH WARREN HARDING

By JACK WARWICK

Boyhood Playmate, School Chum and First Newspaper Associate of the Republican Presidential Nominee

Warren Harding made a friend among the Captains when he rescued the wife of the Dark Man and saved her from an unmerciful wetting and possible drowning, by carrying her a-hore in his strong arms! (I think that exclamation point, or note of admiration, belongs there.)

It came to pass that W. G. was spending a brief recuperative season at Daytona, Fla., at the tail end of one winter, leaving the small Star office staff to run the paper as best we knew. Mr. Amos H. Kling was at the winter resort at the time.

Perhaps I should not tell this story, because of a shortage of details, but what I know of it seems to fit in here. Anyway, something happened to the boat in which Mrs. Amos Kling was a passenger. She simply had to be rescued, and it was providential that W. G. was there to carry the estimable lady a-hore. Gallantry toward a graceful woman is never lost, and from that time on Mrs. Amos Kling was a friend of Warren Harding.

"All the World Loves a Lover"

Early in the year 1890 Warren Harding's loveliness had advanced so far that the subject of matrimony was obscuring his mind. Don't misunderstand me. He didn't tell me his thoughts on the subject, but I knew he was head over heels in contemplation. How did I know? Simple enough. He advised me to get married, and it would not have been like him to advise me to take the precipitous plunge had he not been expecting to follow. That would have been contrary to the old swimmin' hole rules.

The Dark Man no longer worried W. G. In fact, the young editor said to me something like this, in substance:

"I have about decided that I would rather have Amos Kling's enmity than his friendship. As it is, he now lets would want to tell me how to run my business."

Verily, I believe the Dark Man's campaign against W. G. was an asset. They say "all the world loves a lover." However true that may be, an overwhelming majority of the people of Marion were in favor of the young editor of the Star, as against his prospective father-in-law.

Success No Longer Problematic

Six years of struggle, of good humor and the best sort of patient human nature has brought us of the Star to pleasant days. No more fun perhaps, but greater assurance. There was no longer any question of ultimate success. Marion people were more convinced than ever that the paper had come to stay. We could go there on better. We not only felt that it had come to stay, but that it had come to grow. If we did not improve it from week to week we felt that we had failed. Then there was a "hitching up of suspender" and intensified effort.

A gratifying thing was that we were gaining recognition among outside papers. We were being quoted, and I think we had been called promptly. While W. G. was writing long editorials, without apparent effort I was working to build down whatever I might have to say to the public. We represented the long and short of it in editorial writing, but neither of us ever reached that state of mind where anything was good simply because we wrote it. If I happened to produce something that pleased W. G. particularly he had a way of saying:

"Jack, that is almost as good as I could have done."

We understood each other in these matters always. There came a time later when I used to have the responsibility of the office during his absence. It was on one of these occasions that he sent me to the back of the dictionary by calling me his alter ego. (Look it up yourself.)

Our reporter Rhoads was covering a lot of territory. His legs were tireless and his mind was never at rest. If we were closing the forms for the day and he had nothing at the moment to do he would remark casually:

"Guess I'll go out and watch the court house; it might fall down before we get on the press."

We had another reporter who possessed the soul of a poet, and for that reason was not the newsgatherer that Rhoads was. Where Henry Sheets, mentioned in an early chapter, was voluminous and sonorous this lad was flood and flamboyant. He yielded more words than news. I have accused him of arranging his facts to fit his phrases. This seems like a severe accusation as I look back on it now, but the object was to impress him with the necessity of being more careful of his facts.

This man, George M. Hinds, has a place in the Star now, and I hope to see him if he feels that I have been too severe in these references. I am ready to take off my hat to him in recognition of his faithfulness. It is no small thing to plod along in one newspaper office for thirty years or more.

But the one big up-standing fact in these references to the boys of the Star is W. G.'s patience with all of us. He was not only patient but he was an inspiration. He never sent anybody out with a heavy heart to begin a day's work.

The Happy Ending

It was in the spring of 1891, when the robins were building summer homes about the town of Marion, that another new home was being finished and fitted in Mount Vernon Avenue, one of the beautiful residence streets of the town. It is this pretty, cozy dwelling place the Republicans are now journeying and will continue to journey through the summer months of this year. They are going there to meet the W. G. of this story.

This is going to be a wonderful summer for Mr. and Mrs. Warren G. Harding, just as that summer back there in 1891 was wonderful to Warren G. Harding and Florence Kling. They were as busy as the robins building this Mount Vernon Avenue home. So intensely interested were they that their minds and their hearts were absorbed in the work. I may say, too, that the gracious woman who was carried to safety that day down there in Daytona, Fla., by the young editor of the Star, was also interested in this nest building regardless of the objections of the Dark Man.

It was in this home that Warren Harding and Florence Kling were married in July, 1891. And it was this home that soon came to be recognized and heralded as one of the most hospitable in Marion. Members of the Star office force of workmen were always made to feel as welcome there as were the leading men and women of the town.

It should be said that the original porch of the Harding house was a modest one. Later the splendid, comfortable affair that is to be the "front porch" of the 1920 campaign, was added. I remember asking W. G. soon following its completion, if he expected some day to get into politics. For an answer I received a smile that might or might not have been set down as inscrutable.

Gruesome Paving.

Tombstones have been employed in Nottinghamshire, Derbyshire, Lincolnshire and Lancashire, England, for purposes of paving, and some years ago the inhabitants of the Vale of Belvoir raised a vehement protest against such stones being used as a pathway leading to the parish church. The local authorities, however, sought to justify the measure on the ground that there were plenty of old gravestones on hand, which, if used, might result in a saving of taxes.

Unwoven Persian Rugs.

The author of a book called "When I Was a Boy in Persia" says that certain rugs used in Persian houses have not yet found a place in the American market. These are large felt carpets called haman. They are made, not by weaving, but by beating the wool together and then pressing it. They are very thick, warm and noiseless, with red, cream and white borders, and with a field dotted with red, black, white, green, blue and golden circles of wool—quite a Joseph's coat in color.—The Outlook.

Eat Less Meat If Back Hurts

Take a glass of Salts to flush kidneys if bladder bothers you—Drink lots of water

Eating meat regularly eventually produces kidney trouble in some form or other, says a well known authority because the uric acid in meat excites the kidneys, they become overworked, get sluggish, clog up and cause all sorts of distress, particularly back ache and misery in the kidney region; rheumatic twinges, excruciating headaches, indigestion, constipation, torpid liver, sleeplessness, bladder and urinary irritation.

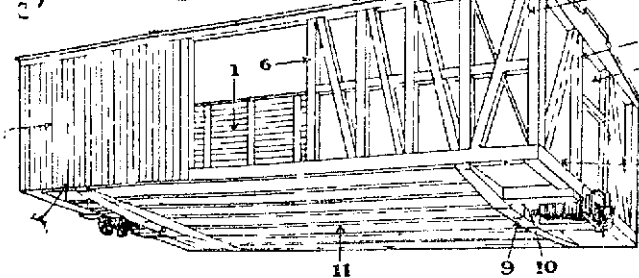

The moment your back hurts or kidneys aren't acting right or if bladder bothers you, get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any good pharmacy, take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salt is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithium, and has been used for generations to flush clogged kidneys and stimulate them to normal activity, also to neutralize the acids in the urine so it no longer irritates, thus ending bladder disorders.

Jad Salts cannot harm anyone, makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which millions of men and women take now and then to keep the kidneys and urinary organs clean, thus avoiding serious kidney disease.

Novel Use for Ice

An engineer has invented the following method for making hollow concrete blocks. Hitherto it has been difficult to make large cavities in concrete, but it can be done, the engineer points out, by embedding blocks of ice in the mass of concrete and introducing small outlets for the escape of the water after melting. This method also makes unnecessary the constant moistening usual in concrete work, as it is automatically supplied by the melting ice.

Grain Cars in Bad Condition

National Crop Improvement Service
WE NOT only have a shortage of cars in which to ship grain, but there is hardly a car in suitable condition. Grain is the only business which has no cars of its own. Box cars set in at the elevator, must be cleaned from lime, salt, fish, brick, manure and the residue of a thousand other things which have been formerly shipped and the worst of it is these cars leak everywhere.

The weighing department of the Chicago board of trade makes a report on every car, and from the looks of some of these reports, grain could be as well shipped in crates as to depend upon the car holding it to the end of the journey. Cars leak under the grain floor, at the end, over, through and around. Grain doors are bulged and broken and sometimes shatter. See fig. 1. Car heels at the end of door, fig. 2; loose sheathings, fig. 3; side of car fig. 4, end of car fig. 5; at the door post, fig. 6; end post, fig. 7; corner post, fig. 8; king bolt, fig. 9; draw bar, fig. 10; bottom of car, fig. 11.

And yet so closely are these cars watched that if properly "compensated" with paper there is very little loss, in dispute.

All elevator men and station agents are urged to report cars leaking in transit.

The bad condition of these cars will not be remedied for some time, at least not until after this crop, so shippers are urged to carefully inspect the cars before sending them on their way.

Iodine

Iodine, the most important by-product of the nitrate industry, is extracted from the liquor which remains after the nitrate has been precipitated. Although some sodium iodide is contained in practically all caniche, iodine is produced by only a portion of the nitrate companies, and the output of these companies is carefully regulated by a producers' trust, in order that the limited market may not be overstocked.

COURT NOTES

Frank T. Gruver, by his attorney James A. Gleason, Esq., has begun action for divorce from his wife, Mrs. Florence Gruver. The Gravers were married June 18, 1908, and separated June 1, 1920. The husband names William Marsh as co-respondent.

Pentz & Pentz, representing The Hagerup-Cook Co., Inc. of Warren, Pa., instituted an action at the Probationary's office to recover from W. P. Brown of DuBois a piano valued at $245.

TRINITY CHURCH PASTOR OFF FOR VACATION

Rev. W. W. Hartman, wife and daughter Louise, left this morning for an extended automobile trip. Next Sunday the Rev. Dr. E. A. Pyles, Superintendent of the Williamsport District, will preach in Trinity church morning and evening. August 15th Rev. J. W. Long of State College will be the preacher. Aug. 22 there will be no preaching service. The last Sunday in August the pastor will take up the work again.

Marine Glue

Marine glue is prepared by dissolving one part of India rubber in crude benzine and mixing with two parts of shellac by the aid of heat. The waterproof character of this cement in connection with its elastic flexibility makes it a useful substance in many applications to horse construction and to furniture. The glue is applied with a brush when warm and cures with promptness. It was originally intended to be used chiefly on board ship and is well known in Europe.

Kissing Once Custom at Dance.

Down to the middle of the Victorian era it was considered quite the proper thing in England for a man to exchange kisses with his fair partner at the end of a dance.

BAD BREATH

DO YOU WANT your friends to avoid you? They will certainly do so when your breath is bad. There is no excuse for anyone having a bad breath. It is caused by disorders of the stomach which can be corrected by taking Chamberlain's Tablets. Many have been permanently cured of stomach troubles by the use of these tablets after years of suffering. Price 25 cents per bottle.

Is Your Home Warm and Cheerful?

Nothing adds more to the enjoyment of the home during winter months than to have it cozy and comfortable throughout.

THE WATERBURY
Seamless FURNACE
Pipeless

supplies an abundance of warm, moist, healthful air—warms the entire home thru one register. As the warm air rises from the furnace the cooler air in the house flows back into the furnace air chambers to be warmed and moistened. The cellar stays cool. No heat is wasted. It is all delivered directly into the rooms above. The Waterbury is an efficient, economical heating system.

The Waterbury will outlast several stoves and does away with their dust, smoke, ashes, dirt and discomfort. It makes your house a home.

See this furnace at our store and let us show you its superior features.
